The typefaces used in these publications are Folio, Geometric Slabserif 703 and Bookman.

Folio, designed in 1957 by Bauer and Baum, was one of the first popular Swiss sans serifs in this fashion, but has since been overshadowed by Helvetica, which was developed in the same year.

Geometric Slabserif 703 is a precursor to the more popular Memphis typeface, both designed by Rudolph Wolf. Memphis being launched in 1929. Memphis has also been superceded to an extent by more popular slabserifs, such as Lubelin, Rockwell, and Serifa.

The original version of Bookman was designed in 1858 by Alexander Phemister for the Scottish foundry of Miller & Richard. Phemister's design has been copied and refined over and over again. More Information: <http://bit.ly/9mZ13G>
